In this era of modernization internet technology plays a very crucial role of development in the fields of science and technology and connecting the world together at the click of a button in a flash of second.

The electronic journals move throughout the world through this amazing technology very fast and are the need today. For supply of information of varied nature the world today is choosing internet and is switching off from the age old technology of printing volumes in hard bound forms. Today's volumes are in soft forms available always and on demand can be available from the net any time.

In this context looking into this demand of young researchers as well as budding scientists and writers we are introducing our electronic version of "LOKAVISHKAR INTERNATIONAL E-JOURNAL" a quarterly journal covering issues of life and chemical sciences, engineering sciences, arts, commerce, education and social sciences.

The first issue of this electronic journal has 17 different research papers covering various aspects of science and technology as well as issues of social nature sent by people from various states of India.

We hope the demand of researchers will be fulfilled through our great endeavour. Good Luck to one and all

Thank you.
